The ALICE project, funded by a grant from the Institute for Museum and Library Services, seeks to build formal and re-usable models of interaction between visitors to museums and libraries and the physical and information spaces in which they work and play.

For more information about the project, see the following links:

- Project staff
- Project publications
- Project details